

Louise Raymond of S&P Global Named to CR Magazine's List of "CR Superstars"

NEW YORK, February 10, 2017 – S&P Global (NYSE: SPGI) announced today that Louise Raymond, Vice President of Corporate Responsibility, has been named to CR Magazine's 2017 list of "CR Superstars." The annual list highlights industry thought leaders who have achieved vast success in their respective corporate responsibility operations.

In 2016, Ms. Raymond led the Company's repositioning of its corporate responsibility strategy to align with the new S&P Global brand. The new CR approach focuses on finding the essential connections between S&P Global's capabilities and the needs of society by championing sustainability; elevating people through science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) education; and supporting women entrepreneurs across the globe. Last year, the Company awarded $150,000 to nonprofit organizations through the Aspen Network of Development Entrepreneurs, aimed at increasing access to finance for women entrepreneurs in emerging markets.

Ms. Raymond, as part of her responsibilities developing and executing a global Corporate Responsibility program, oversees the Company's philanthropic initiatives, including workplace giving, volunteer engagement and grant making.
